Feb 2026, Issue #48

Happy Lunar New Year! The year started both with happy and sad moments this year.

Recently I was invited to the Gung Haggis party in Vancouver, a Scottish (Robbie Burns) slash Chinese New Year festival. There were bagpipes, haggis dumplings, haggis lettuce wraps mixed with water chestnuts and the usual ten course Chinese meal of assorted meat and vegetarians dishes.

The next day I went to a funeral of a friend's mother who had Alzheimer's for a long time. She had been a head nurse and despite getting this disease, her family rallied with her and they set up a foundation for future nursing students in Vancouver in her name, then created many videos and campaigns to raise money for Alzheimer's research. With the right intention and energy, they made the best of their situation which is amazing. Every May there is a walk for Alzheimer's, more info here.

I've been told that the year of the Fire Horse can also be good and bad, will write more about that below!

Artsy Fun - Fire Horse Year Zodiac Predictions

Every time I talk to my husband about Chinese zodiacs or astrology, all he says is "you have two science degrees, please stop!"

The year 2026 is Year of the Fire Horse. Although many horses have been born throughout the years, every time the cycle comes around, the element associated with the animal is different. The element can be metal, wood, water, fire or earth which may balance or clash with the element in the year you were born in. Since there are five elements and 12 zodiac signs, any given combination occurs every 60 years. If you would like to read more about the Chinese lunisolar calendar, check out this article here.

The Fire Horse years are associated with amazing feats and not so great things. The last one happened in 1966, coinciding with the Soviet Union landing its uncrewed spacecraft Luna 9 on the moon, Star Trek's ("The Man Trap") premiere, and the Cultural Revolution which plunged China into a decade of chaos and violence.

Anyhow, part of the fun of Lunar New Year is looking up your own horoscope and seeing how your year is supposed to turn out. It's all part of the fun of the start of a new year! Visit this site to look up your own sign and see what the future holds for you!
